Gossip With Our Friends.—The side walks of Brooklyn are all paved with large flat stones, some of them the entire width of the pavement. During the night the pavements are repaired in Clarke upon these stones with their mauls, producing a clear ringing sound that can be heard at a great distance. We wonder if this is why we came to speak of a "watchman's beat."

This other night on our way home with a friend we discovered man lying by the curb-stone apparently dying. We hastened to aid the poor fellow's head, but were summarily prevented by our friend, who said in explanation: "Some years ago a friend of mine attempted to do just what you were about to do, to a person upon the street. The fellow was drunk, but not wishing to quite think some one was by, pulled out a pistol and shot him dead as he was raising his head. Here was a man!
