This man should be a preserved for its to the ownside of salidants for time written to easier of the time written to easier of the time written to easier of the time of the Southern people will not for he pictor of the Southern people will not for he pictor. There are those among them who are jeal-one of their rights, and whose three are examples of ambition, to salidan positions of influence and respectability. Stank men will never submit to the will of a despot, no matter who any he offered by such a step. The history of the world is full of examples of autional that have recorded to this form of government one time or another, and overy instance too proving a signal failure. The Emperors of Rome wishled their power with despote will. France has seen its rulers, royal, republican and despote. Napoleon constrived by the despote power which he exercised to shake all Europe. and yet his power was his weakness, and at last invited him to the death of an exile. Cromwell was clothed with absolute power, and yet failed in his purpose. So too of Frederickin Frussia and Charles X in Spain. In all these instances great interests were at stake, and great efforts used to achieve results, but the last attempt, was a failure and all was lost. When all is put as the disponal of one man and that fails, there is not reserved, and the substant show the salidate power upon Gen. Lee could not turn the tide of affairs one with it is not within the scope of any human power to give victory and replace detact to a cause like the Southern rebolion. The heart of the rebellion is surrounded by a power that cannot be overcoines, and to chothe Lee with greater powers than he possesse to-day, would only be giving a wider scope to use the array now in his immediate command.
