lofty particisism and sostained by a noble faith.

The debt the nation owes them can never be repeald. To their heroit valor and parient endurance it owes its chistence, and it stands to-day a monoment of their devotion to liberty, dearer to us all heater of the sacrifices by which it has been preserved. With its history city are in-separably linked as are their fathers who struggled to establish it. History will accord them equal honor, and the heroes of Gettyburg, of Petersburg, die Chattanooga and the hundred other battlefields of this war, will always be recognized as worthy devocadants of the illustrions men who made immortal the names of Bunker Hill and Yorktown.

The great drame of robellion has closed and the government is new starting on a new ora. If that eris is to be conclined at the last was, by a robellion, it will be because we fissed to presid by our experience and reduced to make the proper use of the victory we gained.

The recent triumph of the national arms engle not engly to give to the Republic a new lense of existence, but with it an immunity from treason cremove. This much it will openfully do if we are but faithful to the haws and true to ourselvers. But, if on the other hand, in taking comment the many contraction of the properties of the era of general annity and good feeling that existed before the war, we overlook the great erises that that dreuched the land in finternal blood, we need not be surprised if the bloody scenes of the pass four years be re-enacted at some first reperiod. It will not do so up that the failure of a rivelicion necessories. iook the great erims that has drenched the land in finaternal blook, we need not be surprised if the bloody access of the past four years be re-macted at some finature period. It will not do to say that the finding of a richellion so powerful as the last one was will deter men in future from attempting to subvert the Geovernment, and that we can rest in perfect secrity in the newly sequired strength of that Government. This may be true to day, and yet the events of another year may faisily it all. Herroforor we have related entirely upon the good and friendly disposition of men's minds and hearts to-wards the Federal Union for its stability, and it needed a great rebillion to teach on that an additional unfegurad was necessary. Let u heart still further from our bloody experience, or our accurity is fest function. The law man be clothed with majonty and terrow, and its vengenace mean and to thewards.
