With this act terrainated their prosperity is at the parenter of all their prosperity to the sand their this act terrainated their prosperity to the control of their prosperity to the control land, and procedured their proud people in the dust. On everything of interest or value the conflict has left indelible traces, and whatever it touched it biglietd.—Where but a short time ago there was busy life and thriving industry, there is now utter stagnation; where there was oppolence and charges in the control of their property and despair. Instead of enjoying the high advantages that dow from society well regulated, they are strongling with a sort of anarchy from which they can only experience the control of the provider of the control of the control of the provider of the control of the control of the provider of the The wise mes who not hast summer at Chicago to make a creed for the Democracy, error andly in their calculations when they received—by inference of course—that the rebellion was a socoss. Worst of all they persisted in their error, and so did all the membrahip of the veperable society they regressred, until the articles of capitalistic were signed and soaled by Lee and Johnston. The blander was so eggegious that jown so one is willing to condide in the window or asgarity of the men who endorsad it. The Democracy see this, and it is amusing to observe how they endeavor to escape from the evil effects of their mistakes policy. They know very well that the what go of the men who endorsad its the visiting of the last bullet in the struggle was the requient over the political graves of the men who revolved that the war was a failure, and they seek now to find eone one who didn't view things in that light. They want some one to rally around whose faith in the ultimate success of the Union came was never elsaken, and whose support of that canse was unequivocal. President Johnson answers these requirements.—Dissacter could not cloud like faith, notherthat cause was unequivocal. President Johnson answers these requirements—Disaster could not cloud his faith, neither could prescution or temptation weaken his says. Then, too, he was once a Democrat, and had reflected great credit upon the party. Then, too, he was once a Democrat, and had reflected great credit upon the party. They were not long in concluding that he was just, the man they wanted, and they forthwith began to try their arts upon him. His character underwent a complete transformation. He was no longer "Lincoln's hireling," or the "ignorant tailor," or the "despot of Tennessee," but he was recognized as the "faithful among the faithfuls," the "able stateman and devoted patriot who was needed to restore law and order through-out the South." We thought we saw in this just appreciation of the President's character a landshile purpose to support his just appreciation of the President's character a landshile purpose to support his administration. Not withstanding the fact that he had been chosen by another party. It was not until they became hold enough to express their hopps, that we learned that all heir praise was based upon the anticipated recreasory of Andrew Johnson, and that they expected, by empty landsition, to bewilder a nam of strong, is and they have been compelled to shandon in. The answers derived the echeme, and we account hem he hoose that attaches to it. They adopted that did not meet their approval they concerned the President from blam and charged the reeponsibility upon his calinet advisers. This nanower well enough for a time, but at last they have been compelled to shandon in. The answers proclamation had the President from blam and charged the reeponsibility upon his calinet advisers. This nanower was not disquising the fact that he was its author. This broke the tolla that they are wearing, and they have descreted him, as one joined to hastom and devoted partiet was very brief, and his relapse into his old character or the solds. So as it says are true their showing. Who comes n order of things she never could have attained.

THE SOUTH.

The present condition of those States that were actively engaged in the robellion is in pairful constant with their condition before the war. History affords but few instances of such total and complete distraction, wrought in such a marvellously about period. Had the contending armies addressed themselves to the work of destruction alone, without any other object in view, the work could hardly have been more thoroughly done. The rebellion swept over the South like a facre torunde, with resistance force creabing everything before it, and leaving nothing in its track but the work of former greatness and presperity. Before the war the South had attained a power she war non-necinise. Measuring her progress by our own, we were accustomed to spank of her as lagging far behind in the rare, never once reflecting that we were measuring by the call of the condition of the same of the comparison with the progress made by the North, here had undeniably been down but measured by the advance of other matters, it was made in 1890 for
