POETRY.

Woman's Faith.
I saw her in her beauty bright,
The charm and joy of all,
A heart of love and tenderness,
That truly fits for all.
I saw her in her beauty bright,
Her smile her soul's true light,
And bright and by the storm,
I saw her in her beauty bright,
Yield me to her love's way—
She felt that earth had taught to cheer,
Her solitary way.
I saw her when, in age above,
She raised her eyes above,
To seek, amid the native Heaven,
The woman's prayer.
Calm and serene, I see her now,
Still rise above the low,
With "faith unfeigned" and holy hope,
To reach her Heaven at last.

MISCELLANY.

A TRUE TALK AND NO FICTION.
One cold, windy morning, the last Monday in December, 1847, a half-baked man knocked at the door of a young man, who was sitting at a table in the city of Brooklyn. The weather was bitter even for the season, the young man had no clothing but a pair of ragged cloth pants and the remains of a flannel shirt. He was in a state of great distress, and was begging for help. The young man, who was a kind and generous soul, took pity on him and gave him some clothing and food. The man, who was a stranger, was very grateful and told the young man that he was a poor man and was in a state of great distress. The young man, who was a kind and generous soul, took pity on him and gave him some clothing and food. The man, who was a stranger, was very grateful and told the young man that he was a poor man and was in a state of great distress.

The Well-Digger—An Over True Method.

JOHN A. BIRD.
Once upon a time I met a well-digger,
Who was digging a well for me,
And he said to me, "I have a secret,
Which I will tell you if you will."
I said to him, "What is it?"
He said to me, "I will tell you if you will."
I said to him, "What is it?"
He said to me, "I will tell you if you will."
I said to him, "What is it?"
He said to me, "I will tell you if you will."
I said to him, "What is it?"
He said to me, "I will tell you if you will."
I said to him, "What is it?"
He said to me, "I will tell you if you will."
