STAUNTON SPECTATOR AND GENERAL ADVERTISER.

Staunton Spectator.

STAUNTON, VA.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1858.

THE STAUNTON SPECTATOR having as large a circulation as any paper published in Western Virginia, has no superior in that medium of country or an advertising medium.

Another Agitation.
The Kansas issue, with its certain constitutional, sectional agitation, intense animosity and bitter feuds, is again forced upon the country. Kansas will again be the theme of popular discussion and newspaper essays and street corner conversations for a long time to come, Kansas will enter into the speculations of politicians in regard to the next Presidential campaign, and the Democracy, uncertain what course to take, will be in a quandary. Kansas belongs specially to the Democracy, and they will have a lively time with it yet.

As preliminary symptoms of the grand tempest into which the ocean will be tossed, we find the waters troubled in various quarters. It is likely a triple war of great ferocity is in progress between the Douglas Democrats, the Administration Democrats and the Black Republicans. Here we see the novel spectacle of two candidates for an office, the gift of the legislative body, engaged in angry discussion before the masses, and dignified Senators (Douglas and Trumbull) casting their lot at the other, with dazzling volatility. If this bitter contest, exciting universal interest, springs from past connection with this Kansas question, what may we not expect when it again enters the arena? It need Kansas stir up such a strife, what terrible havoc may we anticipate from its resurrection?

A portion of the Democratic party at the South—those who were particularly zealous in behalf of the Leavenworth Constitution—soon very anxious to bush up all reference to Kansas after. After making all they could of the strife, now that it comes back upon them in an ugly shape, they are wonderfully afraid of it. But the ghost "will not down" at their bidding; it will continue to haunt them, and carry confusion into their ranks. The country has never witnessed such an exhibition of statesmanship as the course of the Administration upon this question. They waited upon the acceptance of the Leavenworth Constitution, and then, to save the Northern wing of the party from destruction, carried through a ridiculous compromise which settled nothing except the fact that further controversy was inevitable. This English bill brings Kansas back to Congress, to wrangle over the issue whether 40,000 people may form a slave State Constitution and come into the Union, when 90,000 people are required to form a free State Constitution. This is the plain question to be decided. The Democracy may advise silence, but the question will be agitated. The people of Kansas will have a new Constitution ready as soon as Congress meets; the Northern wing of the South will vote for the admission of the State at once, without regard to the restriction of the English bill; and the President will eat his own words, cancel his signature to a second act of Congress and agree that Kansas may come in. Such is the statesmanship of the present Administration and their supporters in Congress. If, however, the Crittenden amendment had been adopted, as the New York Express says, "the Kansas issue would no more have troubled Congress, while the result would have been just as it is now, 'Free State.' The Southern members of Congress made fools of themselves, and arrived at the same result, the roundabout English way!"

The Prospect.

Feeling an earnest desire for the nomination of Mr. Letcher, for more reasons than one, we have been anxiously observing the "signs of the times" and watching every indication of popular sentiment on the subject. There is no doubt that just around us, in this Congressional District, Mr. Letcher is the favorite with all parties. In regard to other portions of the State we have to rely upon testimony, and that is very conflicting. The Richmond Enquirer of Wednesday last says:

"As we have before intimated, our own course with regard to Mr. Letcher remains unchanged. While we yield him a hearty support in case he can obtain the nomination, we still regard him as the least safe man for a present candidate for that honor. So far as we have been able to learn, by means of private correspondence and some travelling and sojourning in different parts of the State, this position is generally endorsed by the Democracy."

On the other hand, the Richmond South of Thursday has the following:

"The result of our inquiries is an absolute conviction that John Letcher is the favorite of four-fifths of the Democracy."

With such a conflict of opinion between the two leading organs of the Democracy, we are unable to come to any satisfactory conclusion in reference to the matter. Perhaps, however, the fact that the editor of the Enquirer has been adjourning to East Virginia, and the editor of the South among the mountains, may account for the different opinions expressed by them. The West is nearly unanimously in favor of Letcher, while the opposition to him comes principally from the East, and in this state of the case a sectional contest in the nominating convention is not improbable. Democrats in this region tell us they will never consent that Letcher shall be ruled off the track—that his rejection, for the reason alleged against him, would be a stigma cast upon the whole West. The East assert that his nomination, under the circumstances, would be a stigma cast upon them and the State at large. So we go. On the whole we rather incline to think that Mr. Letcher will be tricked out of the nomination. The majority of the voters of the State, we believe, are for him; but a majority of the politicians are either attached to other aspirants, or ashamed to nominate a candidate who fails to the same object which they urged against Summers—and the politicians will pull the wires."

Evening with the Poets."

We had the pleasure of attending the very interesting entertainment of Mr. D. I. Edwards on Saturday evening last. We were sorry to see so small a house to-night. Mr. Edwards recited selected poems in a highly interesting style of delivery, and with irresistible effect upon the audience. In the recitation of humorous pieces he was singularly happy. Among the poems selected for night are the "Kavis," by Poe, followed from the Merchant of Venice, &c. The historical description of a law suit between "Edmund and Bebooth" will be repeated. We are gratified by Mr. Edwards' entertainment to Staunton with the confidence that it will prove satisfactory.

Spending a Penny.

The Staunton Broadside Journalist, has sent the eight miles of telegraphic cable to the Niagara, with a view to have it to be divided into pieces which each place to be bound with the "Journal" at fifty miles per hour. The length of the cable is determined by the receptacle of the Jour-

Extravagance of the Government.

Senator Trumbull, of Illinois, in a speech recently delivered at Chicago, said: "I retain reference to the extravagance of the General Government, which are more or less entitled to influence because the speaker is a 'Black Republican.' Such influence is denied to me, because the expenses of the House and Senate, and the amount of money voted for the same, is to be paid by the people." In 1857, the expenses for all public purposes, exclusive of the public debt, were $67,084.

In 1857, the expenses, exclusive of the public debt, were $67,084 $50,56. The pro parte according to the population in 1857, was $100. The pro parte in 1857 was $2. Mr. Trumbull then gave in detail some examples of government extravagance in regard to the next Presidential campaign, and the Democracy, uncertain what course to take, will be in a quandary. Kansas belongs specially to the Democracy, and they will have a lively time with it yet.

As preliminary symptoms of the grand tempest into which the ocean will be tossed, we find the waters troubled in various quarters. It is likely a triple war of great ferocity is in progress between the Douglas Democrats, the Administration Democrats and the Black Republicans. Here we see the novel spectacle of two candidates for an office, the gift of the legislative body, engaged in angry discussion before the masses, and dignified Senators (Douglas and Trumbull) casting their lot at the other, with dazzling volatility.

If this bitter contest, exciting universal interest, springs from past connection with this Kansas question, what may we not expect when it again enters the arena? It need Kansas stir up such a strife, what terrible havoc may we anticipate from its resurrection?

A portion of the Democratic party at the South—those who were particularly zealous in behalf of the Leavenworth Constitution—soon very anxious to bush up all reference to Kansas after. After making all they could of the strife, now that it comes back upon them in an ugly shape, they are wonderfully afraid of it. But the ghost "will not down" at their bidding; it will continue to haunt them, and carry confusion into their ranks. The country has never witnessed such an exhibition of statesmanship as the course of the Administration upon this question.

They waited upon the acceptance of the Leavenworth Constitution, and then, to save the Northern wing of the party from destruction, carried through a ridiculous compromise which settled nothing except the fact that further con-troversey was inevitable. This English bill brings Kansas back to Congress, to wrangle over the issue whether 40,000 people may form a slave State Constitution and come into the Union, when 90,000 people are required to form a free State Constitution. This is the plain question to be decided. The Democracy may advise silence, but the question will be agitated.
