The Fauxor in Italt.—A correspondent of the London Morsing Herald, writing from Turin, Juee 18th, says:

The march of the French army through the plains of Lombardy must have opesed the eyes of the Franch to the fact that the peasents of Lombardy satertails a most philosophical feeling of indifference for "National independence," and their enthusiasm is not likely to be excited by the conduct of their liberators. Accounts received at the war office depict in the most forch between the rapins, the plings, and the suiversal rais that marks the peaseng of the Francolems. The regiment of Zonaves, which forms part of Bassilos's division—which, as you will recollect, was engaged to the afflict of Malegramo—has acquired a bad pre emiscone by its excesse. They spread themselves by bands in the villages which serround their bivosace and pleader as if they were sugged in an African ris-
