OBITUARIES.

Reading that representations against long obituaries are of no avail, and not having space to publish them except to the exclusion of news matter, we feel constrained to publish them at advertising rates.

General News.

We have no space to comment upon the glorious news from all quarters, and fortunately the news is such as to speak for itself.

Conquering the Valley.

We understand that Gen. Milroy has only 4,000 men at Winchester, and 1 piece of artillery, whereas we have in the Valley 30,000 men and 11 pieces of artillery.

Having no personal acquaintance with him, and judging only from his conduct as Commanding Officer whether that he is a most able man, different of his capacity to devise and execute successful campaigns.

We learn that the enemy in Winchester are tearing down all the untenanted houses to make fuel of them, and by way of illustrating their professions of kindness to the colored people, destroy their churches.

The Yankees in the Mud.

When we want to press last week's Herald back started his grand army on the march to cross the Rappahannock again, and we expected that before this time another great battle would have been fought and another glorious victory won.

From Imboden's Command.

Week before last, Capt. Taylor company A, of Col. Geo. W. Imboden's cavalry regiment, captured on the North Fork in Pendleton county, Capt. Sites and nine of his men.

Beasts Opened.

The Secretary of State has notified the British and French Consuls, that he has received official information of the opening of the blockade of Charleston.

It is understood that the blockade having been opened, and official notice given of the fact, it cannot be renewed by the enemy until sixty days previous notice has been given to neutral maritime governments.

Coming events call their shadows before, and the people of the North are beginning to realize the dread fact that they are resting under the penumbra of a swiftly passing event.

In a recent issue of his paper, the 'New York Tribune,' Greely says: 'From the West we hear of schemes designed by the despots and disaffected of that country to march upon the East, and overthrow the Republic.'

These fears of our enemies are not groundless, and we have reason to augur much good from them.

A Diplomatic Campaign Proposed.

Horace Greely, editor of the New York Tribune, is speaking of conquering the South in a fair contest, though they have a million of armed men, and we have only a few thousand.

Literary Messenger.

We have received the January No. of this excellent Magazine, edited by Dr. G. W. Babby, and published at $2.00 per annum in advance.

Marshall's Resignation.

Gen. Burnside has resigned, and Gen. Sumner and Franklin have been relieved from their commands. Gen. Hooker has no command of the Yankee army on the Rappahannock.

Spent in the Lincoln Service.
