Men are never so awkward, never

'Man are never so awkward, never so ungraceful, never so disgraceful, as when they are making love. A friend is a luxary, a huaband ditto, I suppose; but that insuranteed lovers' are terrible bores. It does very well for women to binsh and look flustered now and then, when occasion makes it desirable; but to see a man with his face red as a ripe cherry, and a real parcel of strong-mindedness, self-reliance and masculine dignity, done up in broadcloth and starbed linen, quaking from the top of his shirt coller, his mouth awry, and his tongue twisted into convalisions, in the vain attempt to say something.—O gracious!

Se said sneary Sophia Lyan aloud to herself, so she ast swinging bestwards and forwards before the wisdow, half buried in the embisions of a luxariant arm-chair, and playing with a deheate ivory fan which lay upon her lap.

'It also seems so strange, not to say tiresume, 'also continued, with a running, manical laugh, 'after one has waltsed and song, quoted poetry and talked nonsense with anyhody till one is pusaled to know which one of the two is most heartless, one's self or one's companion, to her him come down plamp on the subject of matrinony, as thought that was the legitimate result of every such insight an equaintance? 'Wouldn't it' be fun, and wouldn't it plague Harry, if he thought I had been selep while he was talking?'

Sophie's blue eyes danced with suppressed merriment as she gave two or three heavy breathings, and followed them up with a nasel explosion worthy of an orthodox deacon. It was well done, and poor Harry sprang bolt upright, surprised, mortified, clargined. Human nature could stand it no bounger, and Sophie gave vent to her mitth in a burst of triumphant laughter.

'Y-out little witch—you mischief—you spirit of evil,' exclaimed the relieved Harry, so he sprang to her side and caught her by the arm with a grip that made her scream, you descree a shaking for your behaviour! Then, lowering his voice, he sadded gravely:

Words sprang to Sophie's lips that would have done credit to her womanly nature, for the whole depths of her being were stirred and drawn toward him as they never before had been towards any man.

The enemies of the Democratic per, says the Pennsylvanian, have and ty, says the Pennsylvanian, have saddenly broken out into the most extravagant rejoicing over the publica-tion of Mr. Buchanan's letter to Gov. Walker, of the 12th July, 1857, relative to submitting the then contem-plated Constitution of Kanass to the people. The adroit stage management displayed in bringing this letter before the public was intended to create a be-lief among the people that it contained evidence of guilt sufficient to annihilate Mr. Buchanax. But there is nothing in the letter which any friend of the President need be ashamed of. On the contrary, it is an able and cloquent production in favor of submitting the proposed Constitution to the people. It was written before the Convention of Kansas had decided the question, and was intended to persuade them to adopt what was deemed the

There is a genuine patriotism in this determination rising above party, and we believe that the Journal expresses the opinion of a large class of conservative citizens who have not hitherto acted with the Democratic party, when it declares "absolute and uncompromating" hostility to that most mischevom action, the republican party.

Philadeinhiwere not altogether antonanced, it retails a con-cinction integrity on the jurie of the President which would do honor to any man Eving. It shows his cornect desire, repeatedly approaced, and urged upon (flow. Walker that the Constitu-tion which had been adopted by the Lecempton Convention, should be sublimited "to the honor settlers of Kansse" for their rejection or ap-val. That it was not thus submitted to them proval. That it was not thus exhaulted to them, but only the alternate of accepting it with or without the abvery cleans, was not his fact.
